History of Conservation Districts

- Conservation Districts are a response to the Dust Bowl
 - Concerns following the Dust Bowl (1930-1936) prompted legislation declaring soil and water conservation a national policy and priority.
 - Voluntary support from landowners was instrumental in the success of conservation work on private lands. Local leadership was needed to coordinate agency efforts connecting local conditions and priorities.
- 1937 Model Conservation District Law
 - Provided enabling Legislation for states to adoptNevada adopted this model and established conservation districts throughout the state.
- Adopted in Nevada in 1937

Responsibility of a Conservation District

- Nationally, conservation districts all operate under the following general policies:
 - That conservation should be led by local citizens
 - Landowners have legitimate operating goals which are always considered
 - CD's are responsive to landowners, operators and the community as a whole
 - Local representation is achieved by the election of community members , who then serve as board supervisors
 - The best agricultural land should be maintained for agriculture
 - The final responsibility for conservation lies with the landowners

Mission of a Conservation District

- To take available technical, financial, and educational resources, whatever their source, and focus or coordinate them so that they meet the needs of the local land user for conservation of soil, water, habitat and all other natural resources.
- Most importantly, Conservation Districts are founded on the philosophy that conservation decisions should be made at the local level

In Summary

- Conservation Districts are locally led entities that work for the conservation and proper management of our state's natural resources.
- Conservation districts are able to pool technical, financial and educational resources and coordinate those resources to address the needs of landowners and land users under local leadership to get the job done!
- Bring us your ideas, input, and projects!
