BACKGROUND

Each year, the Preparedness and Emergency Medical Services (EMS) Program conducts a comprehensive review of Emergency Medical Services (EMS) utilization to assess system performance, identify emerging trends, and support data-informed planning. This annual analysis includes an examination of call volumes, response patterns, service demand by incident type, and any notable changes observed over the reporting period. The purpose of this review is to provide the Board with clear and timely insights into how EMS resources are being used within the community, highlight areas of operational strength or concern, and inform future strategic and operational decision-making.
